<Business Results>

Architectural Glass	Revenue decrease YoY while significant OP increase mainly due to better sales price and cost in Europe with production cessations. Demand for solar energy glass decreasing in Asia reflecting customer's production adjustments arising from US tariff policy, but improving in Q3. Continuous robust demand in US
Automotive Glass	Revenue and OP increase from PY. Sales price improvement mainly in AGR although sales volume decrease. In Europe, better in sales mix with expansion of value-added products. In Japan, slow sales volumes and prices. In North America, better sales prices for AGR while temporarily unfavorable production efficiency for OE continued. Production schedules adjustments on track in Europe
Technical Glass	Cumulative revenue and OP decrease YoY impacted by sales mix in some products. OP improvement in Q3 with sales mix improvement as planned

2. Forecast for Financial Year ending 31 March 2026

- Full year forecast remaining unchanged. Taking further actions across the Group to improve profitability in a challenging environment
- Expecting a gradual market recovery in Europe but slower than expected. Some uncertainty elsewhere due to US tariff policy
- Assuming JPY continues to be weaker than original forecast and increase of energy and material costs in certain businesses and regions with continuous costs rise including labor reflecting inflation
- Review of taxation assets ongoing which may benefit Q4 tax charge
