2. Reasons for Revision

The Group experienced increasingly difficult trading conditions in its core markets during the third quarter, with a further slow-down in vehicle production and increasing supplies of architectural glass, particularly in Europe. The Group expects these conditions to continue during the remainder of the year.

In the Architectural business, volumes and prices have come under increased pressure with abundant supplies of glass, particularly in Europe and South East Asia, which has negatively affected the Group's asset utilization. Solar energy glass growth remains robust. In the Automotive business, and in some areas of the Technical Glass business, volumes will remain weak, consistent with a fall in light-vehicle production in Europe, Japan and China.

As a consequence of the above, and as shown in the chart above, revenues are expected to decrease due to lower sales volumes and prices, and operating profits are expected to decline with reduced revenues and lower asset utilization. Accordingly profit (loss) before tax, profit (loss) for the period and profit (loss) attributable to owners of parent have been revised. The expectations also reflect the strength of the Japanese yen against the Group's other trading currencies.

The Group will continue to focus on expanding VA product sales, efficiency improvement and cost reductions. Going forward, the contribution of strategic investments and structural reform actions will continue to support the Group's return to profit growth.

The Group is reviewing additional profitability improvement measures towards the end of this financial year. Any material financial impact such as incurring exceptional cost would be announced in a timely manner.
